I was looking at the EZ Off oven cleaner to kill some time. I checked the Great Value (Wal Mart in house brand) and it also contains lye. The reason I bring it up is the Wal Mart brand was $2.59 and the EZ Off brand was $4.97. For those who don't have a lye bath and use oven cleaner it can save you a few bucks.

I have only used the yellow top EZ Off oven cleaner and not too often at that. Others have said it does make a difference between the yellow top and whatever else EZ Off has to offer, so I would just guess that it would also make a difference between EZ Off and store brand. Maybe some others will have better info for youScott

I use the A&H wash soda. As for the oven cleaner I checked a few things while I was looking. The yellow can EZ off list Lye on the label. The regular strength EZ off does not list lye. The wal mart brand did list lye. I guess there is a chance it has a lower concentration of lye, it didn't list a percentage just listed it contained lye.

It works better than Easy Off! Sams had it for a while at great price... currently not showing any!

It should work, but will take just about forever.

Speaking from experience When I first started collecting I used Easy-Off but that really gets costly. For just a bit more money you can buy a 1lb can of lye (Drain Cleaner) and make the lye bath that you use over and over 😊
